By examining the
The smart work policy of Korea and the telework policy of Japan were initiated with the same goals but with many differences in other aspects. This study aims to find the differences and the cause of the differences.

Renationalization of history textbooks and the comfort women issue, the lecture will discuss how the deep-seated conflict in South Korean society is rooted in its course of decolonization.

The project is an extension of Professor Kyong Park's New Silk Roads project, a multi-faceted urban research project that explored the nascent urban conditions emerging in rapidly expanding and transforming Asian cities and regions.
